No need for name calling in our election

By Nikki Basch Davis

If one truly feels he/she is on the right side of an issue there really wouldn't be a need for fury and name calling.

So far, I've been labeled a "liberal" (its being flung around as a derogatory term) ridiculed for my choice of words and called an uneducated person.

All of this had nothing to do with the issues brought up. None of it was an educated, response, bringing a different viewpoint which I would have appreciated, if done respectfully.

Do these people represent the views and arrogance of their chosen candidates?

I will always choose the sensible, non-aggressive candidate.

I choose Kari Birdseye. Only Kari Birdseye.
